Knowledge,

Pronunciation:
Silent final consonant:
When a French word ends with a consonant, it is almost always silent, e.g. the [d] in l'Irlande du Nord and the [s] in le Pays de Galles.
Grammar:
Sentence Opener:
C'est can mean It is or This is. It can be used as a sentence opener when talking about people, places or things. C'est can mean Is it? or Is this? Tone of voice is used to make this sound like a question.
Proper Nouns:
Nouns are types of words that can name people, places or things. The nouns Belfast, Cardiff, Édimbourg and Londres are names of places. A proper noun is a name given to individual people or places.
Nouns:
Nouns are types of words that can name people, places or things. The nouns le Royaume-Uni, la Grande Bretagne, l'Angleterre, l'Écosse, l'Irlande du Nord and le Pays de Galles are place names.
Capital Letters:
The names of towns and countries are given a capital letter in both English and French.
The first word of a sentence is given a capital letter in both English and French.
